Don't Look Behind You, by Lois Duncan, is a fast-paced thriller that has cliffhangers on every page. This story starts out in Norwood, Virginia, with seventeen-year-old April, as the narrator. She was rather self-centered and very afraid of change. She didn't want anything touched in the personal utopia she made for herself. She had the perfect life. She was a great tennis player, and had a nice, popular boyfriend. She liked her family and all was going well. All went well until her life turned upside-down One day in school, April was unexpectedly pulled out of class and taken , along with her family, to a hotel. The family finds out that their father was secretly working for the FBI to uncover a huge narcotics scandal. April and her family are taken from their home and put in a series hotels. Meanwhile, the trial involving the narcotics scandal takes a turn for the worse. The family's name is revealed. The narcotics ring wants to kill the family to eliminate witnesses. They are put into Witness Protection. April's life changes forever. She is moved to Florida. Her name is changed. Her birthday is deleted and a new one is made. Her Social Security is gone and she takes on a new life. Her life turns upside down and the whole time she is being watched by a notorious hitman out to get her and her family... The ending of this book was phenomenal, I would not change it one bit. Read it for yourself to see what I mean! My favorite part of the book was when April and her family are in one of the hotels and a maid comes to their door for room service. Their bodyguard is momentarily gone... The author writes, "At that precise instant I knew what was making me uneasy.
