A Canadian Woman's Experience
with Witchcraft in Mexico

MARGARET J. TALLIS

Synopsis

Margie, an educated Canadian woman would have laughed at the mention of witchcraft as a daily reality. She and her Mexican architect husband, Javier, had a good life remodeling their colonial house together when Javier met a young man at the church choir. The men became good friends. After choir, Javier usually ate at the young man's mother's house, his mother often sending food with Javier for Margie. From this point things began to change. Both Javier and Margie presented erratic behaviors that became more and more unexplainable. They were victims of witchcraft and its poisons.

Customer Reviews

I bought this book in Mexico, and when I returned to Canada I started to read it. I could not put it down. I felt like I was on this journey with Margaret Tallis. There were times when I was so terrified of what was coming next, times when I got so angry, then there were times when I was laughing so hard the tears were running down my face (maybe because I lived in Mexico for twelve years and I could relate), and finally left was the over whelming sadness of such a huge and tragic loss that my heart was in pain. The inner strength and courage it took to share this true story is admirable. Well done, and thank you for sharing your story with us.

I liked this book because of the setting in San Miguel de Allende where I live. I also found Margaret's experience with witch craft to be interesting. She writes well, her descriptions of Mexico are good. This book is a good read.M.N.

The story is very interesting and a fascinating look into magic and culture of Mexico.thanks for a great read!!!
